Professional Expertise

Gilles Betthaeuser is the president and CEO of AOS Studley. His entrepreneurial spirit and foresight fueled his ability to take a small Parisian company that specialized in space planning and grow it into a global organization that provides high-level real estate services. In 1999, he started to acquire and integrate the companies now constituting the AOS group, which employs 380 people and has more than 500 clients. Since its inception, AOS Studley has dramatically increased its revenues.

As president, Gilles has overseen the development and international implementation of the group's strategic and operating plans with unique service offerings in real estate and project management delivered by highly skilled professionals.

Today, AOS Studley has a strong position in Europe, recognized as a distinctive firm that executes large and complex real estate projects.

Gilles speaks french, english and german.

Education

Gilles earned a degree from the EM Lyon Business School in 1986
